

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am interested in joining your team. Games have always been my passion, I have over 20 years of experience as a consumer in how a finished game is expected to behave. However, I am applying with a professional background.

Having received my ISTQB-CTFL certification, I entered the industry as a QA tester a year ago as a volunteer at Bonus Stage Publishing to gain work experience as a professional. In this position I do not have a lead, so have become highly confident in working alone. I adapted Jira and Zephyr to create, execute test cases and do regression testing. This is also where I raise bugs which I then copy to the dedicated Trello Kanban board for the developers where they can drag and drop the bug-cards based on the status. These two Web Apps made Excel sheets obsolete and increased work efficiency and with the inclusion of Trello, it costs extra money to the publisher.

While Game Testing is my voluntary work place, my full-time job is SAP UAT Tester at bp. Here, I am working closely with the QAs of the developer company. My role is working on Web Apps that are connected to SAP and to verify whether everything is working accordingly with the User Stories. I also do regression testing often to make sure that the Web Apps are still working as intended.

Besides using various software to complete my works at both of my jobs, I also use Manual software test techniques such as Decision Tables, BVA and EP as well as Error Guessing. The latter is the most important for me because over time I learn the errors the developers make, so I can target those errors, from past experiences, which saves time and increases the product quality.

My main accomplishments in my career at bp are that at year end of 2022 and 2023 I was in the top 40% performers at bp. In regards to Bonus Stage, I was the QA for Redgar: The Space Viking which was a finalist in the Game Development World Championship in the Best Action Game category in the 2023 Winter Season.

I hope my Cover Letter gave you an insight to my qualifications. I would be happy to have the opportunity to further discuss how I would fit in your team.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Benedek Sándor Seres
